Doug McClelland's Top Ten New York Shows In August, 2011

Colorific! at Postmasters

Despite the hair salon-sounding title, the current exhibition at Postmasters has a lot going for it. Subtitled "We Make An Art Rainbow," the many works in this exhibition (organized by Paulina Bebecka) are hung salon style and arranged according to hue, with a ROY G. BIV scheme in the front gallery and Gray scale in the rear. 26 artists have contributed one or more works, with many participants selected from the gallery's stable. What might have been merely silly as a concept makes for an entertaining art search. In the red section, look for the photographic image by a Southern heir to Diane Arbus—Chris Verene—titled CALLING OUT THE ANIMALS AT HER MOTHER'S GRAVE (2004). Disregard William Powhida's pseudo-bitter, insider and lengthy one-liners, and go to the green wall to spend some time with Guy Ben-Ner's wacky and wise 2003 video Elia-A Story of an Ostrich Chick, a portion of which can be viewed here.
